Jude Carroll

Jude is a Principal Lecturer and has worked in a variety of roles at Oxford Brookes since 1990. She was until recently a Deputy Director of the ASKe Centre for Excellence in assessment standards where she was responsible for enhancing before university's management of student plagiarism.

In 2008/9, she worked on secondment at the Royal Technical University in Stockholm Sweden as an educational developer. In her current Brookes post, Jude supports a range of projects linked to plagiarism, teaching International Students, and supporting efforts to accredit professional learning in the workplace. In 2009, she was awarded a National Teaching Fellowship by the Higher Education Academy (HEA) and funded under the Prime Ministers Initiative (PMI2). Also in 2009, she was selected with a colleague, Dr Janette Ryan, to establish a centre for teaching and learning for international students (TALIS), linked to the HEA. This initiative grew out of the joint publication by Carroll and Ryan, teaching international students: improving learning for all (published by Routledge in 2005).

Jude conducts research, writes and lectures widely on deterring students from plagiarism and on effective teaching in culturally diverse classrooms. She has served as an FDTL5 project evaluator and for the JISC-funded Plagiarism Advisory Service.

Jude holds an MA in adult and post-compulsory learning, writes widely about her areas of interest and is a member of the HE Academy.

Her Handbook for Deterring Plagiarism in HE is published by OCSLD.

Course tutor:

Defining, detecting and designing out plagiarism

Teaching international students

Other activities

A Handbook for Deterring Plagiarism in Higher Education published by OCSLD

Research interests